

Finding the Right Individual Eyelash Extensions

Individual eyelash extensions are the rage these days. After all, they are the fastest and one of the most effective ways to get longer, thicker, and curlier eyelashes—those that can surely be the envy of many.

The Challenge with the Usual Extensions

Before these individual eyelash extensions become popular, though, they need to change the perception of many about lash extensions.

Some of the eyelash extensions are so fake they appear so thick and hard to touch. Worse, when they are attached to the eyelids, they cause the development of allergic reactions or even eye infections. Thus, they cannot be worn for a much longer time. Moreover, they are so prone to breakage. When they fall off, they may sometimes bring along the natural lashes, only worsening the eyelash loss.

Eyelash Extension Products

It's a good thing that there are already professional eyelash extensions to choose. Some of them are called semi permanent lash extensions.

They are known as such because they can be worn for very long periods, in fact as long as one to two months. Moreover, they look like the natural lashes that no one can ever tell you're wearing extensions. They can also be used along with mascara, though the water-based makeup is not recommended to not soften the bond and cause premature extension breakdown.

These extensions have two known secrets. First, most of them are made of rayon fibers. They are soft and appear natural looking, especially when attached to the real lashes. They are also attached per lash. This is to ensure that there is going to be a very strong bond between the synthetic and the natural lash.

There are also plenty of good brands when it comes to semi-permanent eyelash extensions. Two of these include Talika eyelash extender and Novalash eyelash extensions.

The Talika brand is the eyelash extender that makes use of rayon fibers. To attach it, you are going to use mascara. Apply the mascara unto the real lashes, attach the fibers one by one, then apply another coat. This way no one will ever know you're attaching a synthetic one into your eyes. In an instant, you have longer eyelashes.

To maintain the appearance, you can utilize other Talika products such as lipocils, conditioning cleanser, and eyelash curler. The latter may be necessary if you truly want to emphasize the curves of the lashes.

Novalash follows the same concept as Talika. This one can last for more than two months, provided that you have the patience to maintain it, especially after the first application. You can wear the synthetic lashes up to the time the natural ones start getting longer.

Conclusion

Individual eyelash extensions are definitely more dependable than the other extenders available in the market. Some of them have been scientifically tested and thus more hypoallergenic and safe to use. They can also be removed when no longer needed.

Though they are easy to use, it's best to ask for guidance from eyelash specialists to ensure there will be no issues to settle later.
